Hi Brenda,

I have been keeping up on the wind turbine situation and am definitely in favour of keeping the moratorium until all the facts are known. Some areas in Europe are experiencing health issues with the larger turbines unless the setback is much, much larger than what our provincial government says. I also believe there are smoke screens set up by the engineers working for the turbine conglomerates and those conglomerates themselves when it comes to monetary advantages in communities.

Another issue concerning me is that our local airport sees issues with radar and the projected development so close to it. If there is ever a crash and it can be blamed on the turbines/radar connection, whoever approved it will definitely be sued because they were warned and went ahead anyways. There are too many issues surrounding this not to investigate it thoroughly and if the province is taking this on, they should be encouraged so we don’t bear any cost and no liability when there is a lawsuit.

I can tell you I would be furious if one of my relatives lost his or her life due to a radar malfunction blamed on turbines too close. I would not stop until justice was done, and if I feel that way, so will many others. I will want more than blood!! I am not willing to risk anything. Don’t move towards lifting the moratorium and leave it in the province’s hands. More INDEPENDENT study needs to be done. I know for a fact that there is equipment out there that does vibration analysis, not just noise analysis. It can accurately test. It is important to do the vibration analysis as well, because these waves affect a lot of things. They are silent but powerful. That has already been proven. Don’t leave it in the hands of the conglomerates, they will tell you anything to get their money. We have seen this time and time again.

Please share this letter with council. There are many more people in our community who feel the way I do but don’t bother to speak up. They are leaving it to someone else. I don’t mind being their voice. I urge all council members to vote to keep this moratorium in place until all the facts from an independent source are made public and to continue to pressure the provincial government to move ahead with testing so that we know the true score, not the big business conglomerate score.

Sincerely,
Victoria Frank
