PEACE MEMORIAL PARK

Prior to the demolition of Peace Memorial School in 2005, plans were formulated to create a neighbourhood park on this site. This memorial arch relates to the ancient Romans, who built such arches to commemorate famous battles and to remember those who lost their lives for the cause. This old columned portico stands proudly today as a memorial to the school and to the thousands of Canadian men and women who served and gave their lives in the struggle for peace and freedom. Peace Memorial Park was established not only as a remembrance to those who served and gave their lives in the First World War, but also as a tribute to honour the men and women of Canada's armed forces who have served their country in war and peace in the 20th and 21st centuries. Their legacy prevails today in the service of their committed descendants.

Remember Them.

The basic information about activities at the school was acquired through the Hamilton Collection at the Public Library newspaper collection of clippings and micro film.

Information about the military hospital role of the school in 1918-19 was acquired through interviews held with Mrs. Anita Miles and Irene Salvisburg both now deceased who were students at the school in 1920-21. Further evidence of the use of city schools as hospitals was obtained through board documents and Marjory Freeman Campbell's Mountain and a City.

Colwyn Beynon was in attendance at the school as a child back in 1945-46 and personally witnessed the influx of veterans children to the school and in addition was able to give a first hand account of conditions and activities there.

Reference to the construction of the school came by the B of Ed. Archive

Reference to the upgrades to the school came through board records and news clippings from the Hamilton Spectator.

Reference to property ownership and land transfer of the site is recorded in original deeds obtained locally from the Land Registry Office, courtesy the office of Marie Bountragianni MP.

Reference to SS No.7 Barton School on Upper Gage the forerunner of Peace Memorial obtained through Mabel Burkholder's "Barton on the Mount".

Other references were obtained by Colwyn Beynon as the Mountain Historian. He has been published in the Hamilton Mountain News over twelve years writing articles such as "Proud Yesterdays" and currently "Dusty Corners", both describing the history of Mount Hamilton.
Peace Memorial School was built in 1919 on donated land in the former Township of Barton, County of Wentworth. This school was named as a tribute to those who died on the battlefields of the First World War. From 1919 – 1921, part of the school was pressed into service as a military recovery ward, caring for the overflow of wounded from Mount Hamilton Hospital. In 1919, students from S.S. No. 7 Barton School on Upper Gage Avenue began attending Peace Memorial School, grades one to eight. The Hamilton Board of Education assumed control of the school in 1929. The Second World War was followed by rapid growth on the mountain. As a result of overcrowding, six rooms were added in 1948 for the 329 students. Shift classes were inaugurated in 1950, with half the school attending mornings and the other half afternoons. Eight additional rooms and a gymnasium were added by 1952 to handle 922 students. Through the years, declining enrollment and antiquity befell the old school. The Hamilton-Wentworth District School Board closed Peace Memorial School in June 2003, ending 84 years of education service. The former portico, now an archway, remains as a tribute to all those who walked its halls.

THE PLACE OF FIRSTS

In the 1790s, many of Hamilton’s first United Empire Loyalist families settled around this site where the head of an extended inlet from Burlington Bay intersected a prehistoric trail from Niagara.

Smith’s Tavern, the first public house in the area opened at this intersection. In 1796, the tavern hosted the first full meeting of the Barton Lodge Free and Accepted Masons.

Local members of the Land, Springer, Depew, Stuart, Ferguson, and Aikman families erected the first log schoolhouse in Hamilton on the southeast corner in 1816, employing William Applegarth as the first teacher.

In 1824, community focus on the school site expanded with the construction of the first Methodist church in Hamilton, just west of the school. Many members of the first local families were buried in the churchyard. The log church was known as the Hamilton Church, the King Street Church, and when rebuilt in 1868, the Stone Church.

On March 19, 1912, fire severely damaged the Stone Church. It was replaced by the first Methodist cathedral in Hamilton, designed by W. E. N. Hunter, a Hamilton-born architect. The Cathedral opened May 10, 1914. The Italian Renaissance style church, with a dome 56 feet high and 60 feet in diameter, was later known as First United Church. It was destroyed by fire on September 13, 1969.
